

Reflection on learning – Take Home Exam Subject, Assignment C

Team: Apăvăloaei Alexandru-Teodor, Astăluș Adrian Claudiu, Brînză Alina-Elena

Group: 931

Description: the assignment implied putting into practice important testing techniques presented throughout the semester in a team of three students. Given a problem statement, we were required to implement certain methods for the problem and to test these methods using different testing strategies, such as black-box, white-box or integration. Furthermore, each testing strategy that we used needed to be documented as well.

Feelings: while completing this task, we felt very engaged, as we could make use of practices and principles which we previously used mainly during this subject's laboratories. We think that other people had the same type of feelings when encountering this situation, as this assignment is very practical and similar to assignments encountered during the semester. Now, we feel happy and we feel that we have dealt with this situation very well, managing to complete it fast and efficient.

Evaluation: We feel believe that previously working in the same team 'formation' was very helpful as we were already accustomed working together, therefore there were no issues in communication. Moreover, we think that we collaborated efficiently, knowing our strong areas, which allowed us to complete this assignment without issues.

Analysis: As we previously mentioned, things went well mainly due to the fact that this team had the same members when completing the seminary portfolios as well, so we already knew how to work together in an effective manner. Furthermore, we think that the structure of this assignment was very fitting to our team as each of us could make use of our individual strengths and knowledge without overlapping each other.

Conclusions: All in all, we learned how to perform better as a group, rather than focusing on individual performance, how to communicate better, and how to collaborate when we need to solve issues. If this situation happened again, we don't think that we would do anything differently.

Action Plan: For such a situation to be handled better, communication skills could be developed furthermore, as well as adaptability, because we will not always be part of the same team. These skills could be improved by doing group tasks as part of different groups, so we can be exposed to different personalities and ideas.
